About the conference...
The process of multi-disciplinary research and findings from multi-disciplinary teams researching health inequities will be the focus of the day.
Ron Labonte, Director, Globalization and Health Equity Research Unit, Institute of Population Health, University of Ottawa, will be the key presenter. He will be joined by other prominent speakers from Australia and the USA.

About AHIP...
The Australian Health Inequities Program (AHIP) is Australia’s largest-yet investigation into social inequity and health — an NHMRC-funded $2.4 million initiative over five years. Run through Flinders University and the University of Melbourne, the project’s main aims are twofold: first, to build capacity in multidisciplinary population health work by increasing understanding of the complex social, economic and environmental factors contributing to health inequities; and second, to translate research into improving policy, program and practice designed to reduce the health differences between different groups. AHIP’s focus is on urban and regional communities where there are large discrepancies in health. The project team has expertise from a range of disciplines including public health, social epidemiology, sociology, labour market economics, housing, geography and regional development.
