Aims of symposium

1. To provide a forum for international exchange between Indigenous peoples on the topic of the social determinants of health
2. To allow presentation of case studies on the social determinants of Indigenous health from a variety of settings around the world and discussion about the general lessons from the case studies
3. To derive key lessons from the case studies and background situational analysis report concerning the action needed to address the social determinants of Indigenous health globally in order to improve the health status of Indigenous peoples
4. On the basis of the above provide material to inform the preparation of a report making recommendations about the action required to address the social determinants of Indigenous health to be tabled and discussed at the 8th meeting of the Commission on the Social Determinants of Indigenous health to be held in Vancouver, June 2007
